This is generally one of 3 activities. The first is read a section of the book leading up to the next focus point in the book - if it is a book rather than an extract. The second is answer questions based on the discussions during the guided read.

Guided Reading - Just how I do it...

Have started whole class reading this year and it is much more enjoyable to prepare and teach. The differentiation and text choice is still an issue for the less able readers in my Y56 class but with support and an established routine I hope they will develop greater stamina, enjoyment and of course comprehension.
