And I am sure, like the original poster, most of us heard the rule to use “72 dpi” (which should be ppi of course) when designing for screen. The 72 dpi you hear a lot results from 1) the misunderstanding about dpi and ppi (dots and pixels) and 2) monitors historically having a resolution of 72 ppi. By the way, modern monitors have much more — the Retina display of the new iPad uses 264 ppi.

The answer might surprise you: 72 ppi. The pixel resolution of the screen of both the iPad 1 and 2 is 132 ppi. But, if you are designing a document at actual size for the iPad, with page dimensions of 1024 x 768 pixels (or points) or 768 x 1024 pixels, the minimum “effective” image resolution only needs to be 72 ppi.

A value of 1 indicates a classic 96 DPI (76 DPI on some platforms) display, while a value of 2 is expected for HiDPI/Retina displays. Other values may be returned as well in the case of unusually low resolution displays or, more often, when a screen has a higher pixel depth than simply double the standard resolution of 96 or 76 DPI.
