Sky's Stuart Ramsay reports from the Rio Grande, a river flowing through from Colorado all the way to the Gulf of Mexico, where people with small children and very few possessions try to reach the US.

After 2,000 miles on the road, a desperate bid to reach America comes down to a treacherous final 50 metres

But Stevenson, via his classic account of the trip, Travels with a Donkey in the Cevennes, pretty much invented a sub-genre of travel writing that still infests the best-seller lists today.
